

Death Ring Tightens Around Japs In Manila

"Your action has brought much unfavorable publicity and criticism to the American Legion and your action was officially called to my attention by the war department."

A statement issued by officials of Hood River post today said:

"Hood River American Legion Post No. 22 deems it inadvisable at this time to take any action on restoration of the Japanese-American names to the county's service roll."

By United Press

The Japanese Domei Agency announced today that three more Japanese admirals had been killed in action, bringing to 87 the number of enemy naval officers of flag rank whose deaths have been disclosed by Tokyo since May, 1944.

The Domei dispatch, recorded by FCC, said the Yokosuka naval station identified the three officers as Rear Admirals Kozo Kimura, Yoshiyuki Kishi and Ichiro Jo, but gave no further details.

and proven command when called on. May God speed the day."

MacArthur's brief statement was seen here as an answer to suggestions from other sources notably speculative stories that his command would be "through" after the Philippines were liberated.

The statement indicates strongly that MacArthur believes the brilliant record of his command entitles it to major participation in further moves toward the final goal, Japan itself.

Achieves Ambition
In freeing the Philippines, the general achieved something for which he worked unceasingly for three years, during which he spared neither himself nor his troops. He won victory after victory with surprisingly small casualties.

Intimates report that MacArthur at 65—one year past the regular retirement age—physically is 10 years younger. They say he believes he has shown he knows how to fight the Japanese and is eager to go on helping toward that end.

Thus his statement means that he is leaving it to his commander in chief and the American people to make whatever use of him and his men henceforth that they may desire. He is ready to do whatever may be asked of him.

His Southwest Pacific command covered Australia, the Solomons, the Dutch East Indies and the Philippines. Any further progress northward or eastward would bring him into territory included in Admiral Chester W. Nimitz's Supreme Pacific command.

Text Of Statement
The text of MacArthur's statement follows:
"The fall of Manila marks the end of one great phase of the Pacific struggle and set the stage for another."

"We shall not rest until our enemy is completely overthrown. We do not count anything done as long as anything remains to be done. We are well on the way, but Japan itself is our final goal."

"With Australia safe, the Philippines liberated and the ultimate redemption of the East Indies and Malaysia thereby made a certainty, our motto becomes, 'On to Tokyo.'"

"We are ready in this veteran and proven command when called on. May God speed the day."

ROBERT DILLS KILLED IN ACTION ON LUZON

Robert Dills, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Dills, of Springdale Drive, Dayton, was killed in action January 9 on Luzon, Philippine Islands, according to word received Monday from the War department by his parents. He had been serving in the signal corps.

Dills was the grandson of Mrs. J. L. Strubling, of 119 North Washington street, who is spending the winter in Chicago, Ill., with her daughter, Mrs. Ethel Mickel. Mrs. Dills, mother of Robert Dills, is the former Nell Hurdle of Circleville, another daughter of Mrs. Strubling.

In addition to the parents, he is survived by his wife who lives also in Dayton.

BILLS INTRODUCED IN STATE LEGISLATURE

COLUMBUS, Feb. 6.—Bills introduced in the Ohio General Assembly last night included:

House:
Reps. McCandless, R., and Barker, D., Butler—to give conservancy districts the right to control and regulate subsurface water.

Reps. Ashburn, R., Franklin, and Sotak, D., Cuyahoga—to increase from three to five the members of the state cosmetology board.

Rep. Fess, R., Greene—to appropriate $25,000 for the purchase of 500 acres for the John Bryan park.

Rep. Thomas, R., Marion—to extend the two-cents-on-a-pack cigarette tax during the next biennium.

Rep. Simpson, R., Hardin—to amend the accounting sections of the probate code with regard to the requirement of notice.

Rep. Turner, R., Meigs—to require lights in the cabs of railroad locomotives.

Rep. McKelvey, D., Monroe—to appropriate $441,000 for the purchase of 44,100 acres for the Shade River Forest tract.

Rep. Meyer, D., Montgomery—to permit polls to stay open until 9 p. m. in counties of less than 70,000 population and to require them to remain open in counties of more than 70,000 population.

Rep. Fleckner, R., Ottawa—to extend the one-cent-a-gallon liquid fuel tax until March, 1947.

Reps. Cook, D., Stark, and O'Neil, D., Summit—to permit counties to construct airports outside their county lines.

Rep. Cook, D., Stark—to permit first grade high schools to appoint teachers without consulting the county superintendent.

Rep. O'Neil, D., Summit—to permit juvenile court decisions to be appealed to the appeals court.

Reps. Harter, D., and Poda, O., Summit—to provide for the election of an Akron traffic judge.

Rep. Poda, D., Summit—to increase maximum juror's fee from $5 to $10 a day and establish a $5 minimum.

Rep. Bellis, R., Van Wert—to give a candidate who loses an election in a recount the right to recount other districts.

Senate:
Sen. Whittenmore, R., Akron—to turn back to Barberton the Citizens' hospital which never has been used by the state; to authorize sale of Akron cavalry unit equipment by adjutant general.

Sen. Burke, R., Butler—to give conservancy districts control and regulations of subsurface waters.

Sen. Mahoney, D., Cuyahoga—to appropriate $1,000,000 for acquisition and development of 20,000 acres within Little Mountain forest-park area in Lake county.

Sen. Sheppard, R., Summit—to amend the Torrens Lands registration law.

Sen. Addison, R., Franklin—to provide for the treatment of mentally ill and epileptics by non-confinement methods.

Sen. Hildebrand, D., Lucas—to reenact three percent diversion of monies from municipally-owned utilities for poor relief.

Sen. Addison, R., Franklin—to permit common pleas and juvenile judges to commit persons pleading insanity as defense for crime to state hospitals; to define drug addiction and alcoholism as mental illness.

House resolutions introduced:
Reps. Poda, D., Summit, and Turner, R., Meigs, to create standing committees on aviation in both houses.

Reps. Poda, D., Summit, and Slagle, R., Gallia—to petition the secretary of war to establish suitable hospitals in Ohio for the treatment of returned war veterans.

House resolutions adopted:
Reps. Meyers, R., Allen—to authorize the house clerk to purchase general codes and supplements for members.

DISLIKES THE PUBLICITY
MARENGO, Ia.—Drunken driving charges have their disadvantages. A Marengo farmer, who was picked up for driving his truck, loaded with 1,200 pounds of coal, down the Rock Island tracks, complained: "I don't mind paying the $10 fine, but I don't like the publicity."

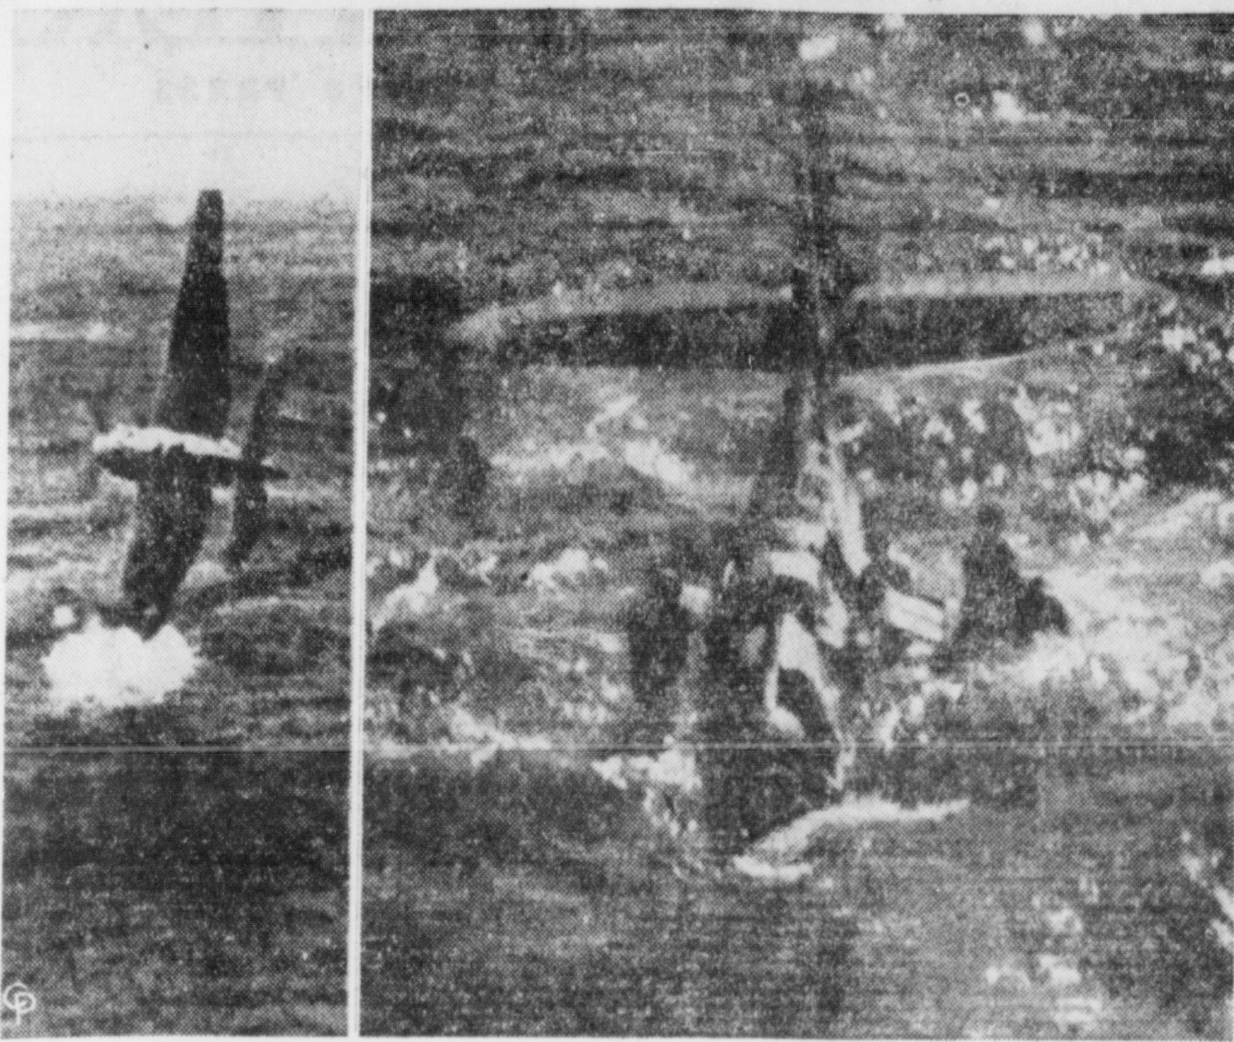

ADM. ADMIRAL—HE HOPES
FORT LEWIS, Wash.—Secretary Forrestal doesn't know it yet, but the Navy has a new Admiral. Officials at the Fort Lewis induction center recently signed Arthur Admiral, Mount Vernon, Wash., into the Navy, after he explained, "I want to be sure to live up to my name."

CROSSBOW'S A 'WEAPON'
LANSING, Mich.—Attorney General John R. Dethmers has ruled that crossbows are classified as dangerous weapons and under Michigan law may not be transported in automobiles except by permit. The opinion was prepared for the Michigan Archery Assn.

NEW REASON FOR ARSON
NEW HAMPTON, Ia.—When Clarence Schueller, 23-year-old farm hand, was arrested on charges of arson, he told officers he was "tired of hatching," and set fire to farm buildings formerly tenanted by Herman Schwickerath to "scare Schwickerath" into moving his stock from the farm so he wouldn't have to care for it.

churia, Formosa and the Pescadores islands.

3. Japan shall be expelled from all other territories taken by "violence and greed."

4. Korea, a Japanese vassal state, shall be freed.

The Roosevelt-Chiang-Churchill communique also specifically pledged joint war on Japan as long as necessary to obtain her "unconditional surrender."

From Cairo, where they met with Chiang, President Roosevelt and Churchill sped to Tehran to confer with Premier Josef V. Stalin. Since the Soviet Union is not at war with Japan, it was not feasible for Stalin to sit in on the Cairo conference.

Policy On Huns
The Roosevelt-Churchill-Stalin conference at Tehran produced a communique of fundamental importance to the immediate and future relationship of the three states. But it was phrased in deliberately general terms for the future in contrast with the Cairo communique's specific discussion of some of the unpleasant things Japan might anticipate.

There was no mention in the Roosevelt-Churchill-Stalin communique of "unconditional surrender" of Germany. The unconditional surrender stipulation was an after-thought to the January, 1943, conference between Mr. Roosevelt and Churchill. They met newsmen at Casablanca after the conference ended and Mr. Roosevelt said the United Nations objective was "unconditional surrender" of the Axis enemies. Churchill accepted the stipulation at once.

Stalin has never formally accepted "unconditional surrender." Statements of Russian policy more often have emphasized annihilation of Hitlerite Germany or destruction of German military might, but with some pre-surrender assurances to non-Nazi Germans.

Communique Awaited
The communique from the current Big Three conference will be scrutinized here and abroad for any reference to "unconditional surrender." It will be examined, also, for any specific language such as that which came in 1943 from the Cairo conference with Chiang.

All of the Big Three conferees have promised in one way or another that Germany will get what is coming to her. But on the only occasion when they made a joint statement, their language was so general that any specific post war intentions were wholly obscured.

The Tehran communique showed Roosevelt-Churchill-Stalin agreement on time and place of the Anglo-American invasion of Western Europe. It expressed confidence that Germany would be licked badly. It promised an enduring peace and recognized United Nations responsibility to make a peace which would appeal to the world's masses.

But as for the multitude of other specific postwar problems, including what Germany might anticipate as a loser, the communique avoided anything specific. Here is what it said:

"With our diplomatic advisers we have surveyed the problems of the future. We shall seek the cooperation and active participation of all nations, large and small, whose peoples in heart and mind are dedicated, as are our own peoples, to the elimination of tyranny and slavery, oppression and intolerance. We will welcome them, as they may choose to come, into a world family of democratic nations."

than King anticipated, possibly in mid-April.

4. King probably will not call another session of parliament before general elections, thus depriving his party of whatever opportunities such a session would provide for entrenching itself.

An immediate result of McNaughton's defeat was that the defense minister will be unable to present his department's budgetary needs or any other matter of his ministry to commons. He is a cabinet member without standing in commons, although commons could grant him special permission to appear before that body.

Political Fireworks
Political fireworks flared immediately after results of the Grey North election were determined.

McNaughton said "we have had a lesson. The forces of tory reaction have won the first skirmish, but we are more awakened and more determined than ever."

"The battle must now be joined," he said, "a battle that is to decide the future of Canada for a long time to come. I have just been speaking with the prime minister and he is not down-hearted. We will get after them (the opposition) on short notice."

Bracken hailed Case's victory as a party triumph of "great comfort to our men fighting overseas." He said "it was indicated by these elections in Grey North that when a government takes its people into war it must call its manpower fairly, not unfairly."

"Reinforcements must be adequate and not stinted, and the war effort must provide that there is a closer approach to equality of service and equality of sacrifice," he said.

Case promptly credited Bracken for his victory.

King said he wondered "whether or not any useful purpose can be served by holding another session of the present parliament." He said another session would deal mostly with war measures, making McNaughton's now-barred presence "absolutely essential."

King blamed the PC and the Cooperative Commonwealth Federation opposition for "creating and fostering the very circumstances which may make a general election inevitable... at the and Third armies were grinding steadily forward through the outer Siegfried defenses, but were meeting stiffer resistance as they progressed, particularly in the case of the Third Army. Lt. Gen. George S. Patton's men began meeting counter-attacks after advancing a mile or more before Prum.

Take Two Dams
The Third Army had taken two of the upper Roer dams and were closing in on the main Schwammendamm dam. Control of the dams would facilitate an offensive across the lower reaches of the river on the American Ninth and British Second Army fronts above Aachen.

At the southern end of the front, American and French troops broke the German Colmar pocket into isolated groups, trapping many of the enemy and driving thousands of others across the Rhine under a hail of shell fire.

In the air war, American heavy bombers and fighters were over Germany again today in the wake of a night attack on refugee-packed Berlin by British Mosquito bombers.

A two-hour procession of Flying Fortresses, Liberators and fighters streamed over the east coast toward the continent soon after dawn.

The German radio reported numerous Allied air formations over western Germany, and said some were heading toward Northwestern Germany.

GAS BAN LIFTED AS BITTER COLD LEAVES STATE

Officials of the Ohio Fuel Gas company announced Tuesday lifting of the extreme curtailment of the use of gas by domestic and commercial customers.

It was announced that all industries classified as critical are being restored to service. Many industries, engaged in less critical war work are still denied the use of gas and company officials urged customers to use gas as sparingly as possible so that these plants can be returned to production as quickly as possible. Minimum use of gas by customers daily would eliminate the necessity of extreme curtailment of service during cold weather, company officials stated.

Weather forecast for this area was warmer with rain expected Wednesday. Low temperature in Circleville Tuesday was 11 while Monday's high was 34.

DIVORCE GRANTED

Divorce was granted Tuesday in common pleas court to Kathryn Virginia Morehart from Lewis E. Morehart on charges of gross neglect. The plaintiff was awarded custody of a minor child, $30 per month alimony and the defendant was ordered to pay her attorney fees.

INJUNCTION SUIT FILED
A temporary restraining order was issued in common pleas court Tuesday to the plaintiff in an injunction suit brought by Frank H. Carpenter against Cecil Tomlinson and John Tomlinson. The plaintiff asks that the defendants be restrained from using hay stored on a farm on which they are tenants.

HELD FOR NON-SUPPORT
Otis Webb, who has been working in Portsmouth, was in Pickaway county jail Tuesday charged with non-support. Webb was arrested in Portsmouth on a warrant after his wife, who lives near Ashville, filed charges. He was returned here by Deputy Sheriff Vern Pontious and Probation Officer John Kerns.

MANILA TO BE ABANDONED AS U. S. NAVY BASE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6.—The Navy does not plan to develop Manila bay as a major U. S. base after the war but instead probably will build bases in the Southern Philippines, possibly Mindanao island, it was learned authoritatively today.

Shallow water and dangerous shoals were given as the major reasons for abandonment of Manila and other Luzon harbors in favor of more southern islands, but the weather is also a factor.

Mindanao, which has at least two good, deep-water harbors on the southern coast, is below the path of Pacific typhoons.

It was also said the Navy would not place too much importance on a large number of naval bases due to the great mobility it has achieved during this war. Task forces have operated for periods of weeks some 1,500 miles from their bases without having to return, and the Pacific fleet itself has been roaming almost at will without bases.

PEACE PLANNING

MOST people in this country agree that every possible ounce of energy must be devoted first of all to winning the war. But a few shortsighted extremists consider energy spent upon international postwar plans as wasted. There seems to be an error in thought here.

This war is not going to end suddenly and neatly, with all the guns stopping at once and a peace conference the next week. The administration of conquered territory, for example, doesn't wait for that millennium. Other problems, like the future of Germany, cannot be settled without detailed analysis. Tentative blueprints are not only useful, but absolute necessities for such serious decisions.

We have several of these, in the Dumbarton Oaks proposals, the results of the Bretton Woods conference, and others. But they, like any original draft, require considerable working-over before a practical solution can be reached which will assure a continued peace.

Some of that working-over is the responsibility of the average person who has to fight the wars. Every citizen of the Allied Nations should know what he wants the peace to be, and why, and how he thinks it should be administered. And then he should tell his government. For Congress and the administration will be strengthened in their efforts to obtain permanent security for all of us if they know what the majority wants.

RAILWAY THRIFT

I believe that when you have the money, you ought to pay your debts." This sensible advice comes from Joseph T. Sweeney, Cleveland's finance director, who has just arranged for the payment of $600,000 worth of bonds of the city-owned transit system. In less than three years of municipal ownership its bonded debt has dropped from $17,000,000 to $4,400,000.

Wise private enterprises are following suit. The Missouri-Kansas-Texas Railway, in the first 11 months of 1944, reduced its indebtedness by $11,000,000, cutting its annual interest charges by a million dollars. Since 1941 the road has brought its debt down from $92,000,000 to $57,000,000. A prosperous railroad can benefit greatly the communities it serves. The prosperity of the "Katy" should mean much to Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas.

Our progress on the western front seems like that of the frog in the well, that climbed up five feet every day and fell down four feet every night.

UP AND DOWN BROADWAY

By JACK GAVER
(Subbing for Mallon)

NEW YORK, Feb. 6—There is at least one place in town—and no vegetarian hangout either—where the shortage of steaks and chops doesn't cause a ripple. That's the top floor-and penthouse suite of the Plaza hotel where the staff of Gourmet magazine keeps cozy in 22 rooms complete with wine "cellar" and a couple of chefs.

The staff is just getting settled into its new quarters which are not yet completely finished. In fact, it will be impossible to do all the things planned until after the war because not until then will the materials be available to bring the kitchen quarters up to snuff.

Gourmet magazine was four years old last month. It started with a controlled free distribution and has grown to a net paid circulation of close to 50,000 in a period when it would seem that the food situation was scarcely conducive to the best interests of a magazine devoted to the subject. But actually Gourmet fits right into the situation.

During its life the magazine has never offered or discussed menus involving steaks, chops or broiled chicken. Nothing against them; they're just a bit on the routine side and no challenge to the genuine food fan.

Tall, slender, distinguished-looking Earle R. MacAusland, who hails from Boston and looks the typical Back Bay gentleman, explained the magazine's outlook in his capacity as editor and publisher:

"Gourmet magazine isn't interested in nutrition. It believes that food well-prepared and well-seasoned has all the nutrients that anyone desires. (None of this vitamin and calories money business for Gourmet.) This country is blessed with more food than any country, but we waste much more through ignorance of how to prepare it and how to use it. Many of our nicest dishes come from the least expensive cuts of meat. Much of our flavor comes from the things that the average home turns into the sink or the garbage pail. The water the vegetables are cooked in, the bones that are left after a roast of beef or a roast chicken are all things that can add flavor to other dishes and lift them from the ordinary to the exotic."

MacAusland said the magazine moved to the Plaza because this hotel is one of the landmarks of good living in the United States and no more than a proper setting for such a publication. Knocking about in the duplex quarters are two chefs. One of them, Louis P. De Gouy, is on the editorial staff. The other is the fellow who actually does the cooking when there are guests for luncheon or dinner.

MacAusland was quite positive that he is not running a testing kitchen. His people already have been through the experimental stage and know what they're working with. He said the magazine has the largest collection of fine recipes in the country—about 50,000.

In line with the school of thought that only men actually can appreciate and commit good cooking the magazine is edited for males. MacAusland said 70 per cent of the subscriptions came from men and that most of the rest of them came from women buying subscriptions for men. However, women definitely are interested readers, he added. He hopes they will learn something.

DIET AND HEALTH

HEART COMPLAINTS AND GOITRE

By Dr. Herman N. Bundesen
President, Chicago Board of Health

It is not an easy matter to tell when certain symptoms are due to some actual disease of body tissues and when they are due to a nervous disturbance. For example, the condition known as neurocirculatory asthenia is believed sometimes to be brought on by worry, overstrain, and anxiety. In this disorder there are such symptoms as rapid beating of the heart, shortness of breath, fatigue, dizziness, pain over the heart, headache, fainting, diarrhea and poor appetite.

But these same symptoms may also occur in patients in the early stages of toxic goitre, which is a condition in which there is an excessive amount of secretion from the thyroid gland.

Neurocirculatory asthenia is more common among women than men, and it is not unusual, according to Doctors Eli Moschowitz and Solon S. Bernstein, of New York, for toxic goitre to develop in patients with neurocirculatory asthenia. Excessive sweating of the palms and the armpits, and a feeling of weakness and tiredness, occur in patients with either of these disorders. Neither disease is common in the very young or the very old, and either one is more likely to develop in persons whose families show a history of nervous disorders.

One of the important tests to be carried out in making a diagnosis of toxic goitre is the basal metabolism test. This test is done by having the patient breathe into a tank and then measuring the amount of oxygen which is used up in a given period of time. In the early stages of toxic goitre, the metabolism rate may be normal, but after a time the rate increases.

In neurocirculatory asthenia the metabolism rate is not changed. Another good way of telling these two conditions apart is to give the patient iodine in the proper dose. Neurocirculatory asthenia is not benefited by this treatment, but a slowing of the metabolism rate will occur in the patient with toxic goitre.

It would appear that these physicians are of the opinion that neurocirculatory asthenia and toxic goitre are closely related disorders. One may develop into the other. Hence, any patient who has neurocirculatory asthenia must remain under the care of the physician. From time to time studies should be made to determine whether or not goitre has developed. If so, the condition may then be promptly treated with iodine and rest in bed—in mild cases—and operation in more severe ones.

The patient with neurocirculatory asthenia is benefited by rest and freedom from strain and worry. A careful inquiry must be made to determine the cause for the worry and anxiety. If the cause can be eliminated, these patients as a rule promptly improve.

Tomorrow Dr. Bundesen will discuss "Sore Throat". (Dr. Bundesen will answer letters containing medical questions only through his column.)

ASCITES

What symptoms would indicate that a person had developed ascites? . . . I. D. S.

ANSWER

Ascites means a collection of fluid within the abdomen. Swelling of the abdomen is usually present in such cases. An examination by the physician will usually reveal when ascites has occurred.

Looking Back in Pickaway County

FIVE YEARS AGO

Miss Gretchen Moeller, chairman, Mrs. Howard Newell Stevenson and Mrs. A. D. Newmyer were elected members of the nominating committee of the Monday club.

School transportation figures for the state and for Pickaway county released by George D. McDowell, superintendent of county schools, showed that school-owned buses provided a cheaper and more efficient method than the leased and partially owned system.

The Circleville board of health reaffirmed its decree that the city jail was to be padlocked unless city council did something to change its unsanitary condition.

10 YEARS AGO

The topic of the year, "Failures" was the keynote of the program for the meeting of city teachers at the high school building.

Where money was coming from to meet the February 15 payroll for police, firemen, hospital employees, Memorial hall janitor and health board clerk, amounting to about $1,000, was a matter to be discussed by council at its regular meeting.

Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Winship, of Hart, Mich., arrived for a visit with Mrs. Winship's sister, Mrs. William Foresman, South Scioto street.

25 YEARS AGO

George Wardell, Louis Drake and H. M. Owens attended a Farmers' meeting at Ohio State university.

A fox drive for the benefit of the new Christian Church of Williamsport and the proceeds of the lunch served afterwards cleared $790 for the church.

Seven members of the families of C. V. Baker and W. H. Crites, who lived in the same house in Stoutsville, were overcome by fumes of natural gas. Fire in the furnace had been turned low for the night, but toward morning the pressure became so strong that the poisonous fumes filled the house. Mr. Crites was able to reach the phone and call a doctor.

CHAPTER TWENTY-ONE

Aggie had shut his eyes. Sun fell in slanted rays through the pines. It touched his face and accentuated the concentration there. Then, suddenly, one eyebrow twitched and his head moved with the impulsion of a smile.

"I've got it, Wes," he said quietly. "It'll be easy to check the places Bogarty stopped en route here. A cinch."

"Yeah? How?"

"Because he was carrying in that car a silver fox with a collar. A thing people would notice, huh?" The trooper's handsome face was indulgent. "And that brilliant deduction comes from what, doctor?"

"Deduction? Nonsense! You can't deduce facts like that! It's a memory. Why did I think the fox was a dog? I was sitting on the veranda rail and I said to myself, 'There's a dog.' I was sure of it. The beast saw my pipe smoke and turned. 'No,' I said to myself, 'it's not a dog. It's a fox.' Then Dr. Davis came from Sarah's room and I dumped the whole matter out of my head. Well—I've thought back. That fox had a collar on it."

"Collar?"

"Yeah. He came down the road in the early light—and he was wearing a collar. I must have seen the glint of metal—or the curve of leather. So I thought of dog. Anyway, I remember he had a collar. Then he turned, and I saw it was a fox. And I erased the collar from my mind. Foxes don't have collars. Because I became certain it was a fox, I assumed I'd been mistaken about the collar. That's how people think, Wes. At least—such loopy processes are what pass for thinking among us. Bogarty raised silver foxes—a hobby—and this one must have been a pet. Or a present. He brought it along—"

The trooper was impatient, again, to enter the discussion. "I'll check that at once. And if Bogarty did have a fox along—and didn't shoot off into the lake here, in which case the fox might have escaped with its life but it would hardly have come around the lake to Indian Stones in order to bite Calder on the back of the hand—then Bogarty carried it into Calder's house—"

"Or led it on a leash—"

"—and they scurried—and the fox bit Calder—and got away—". The trooper stared toward the water. One of the boats was moving into shore. "All right," he continued. "We've doped out a lot. Bogarty did see Calder. The bite makes that pretty clear. Always assuming he was traveling with one of his foxes, of course. And you happened to spot the fox in the morning—which is lucky for me—because it means that I want to find out where this Bogarty guy is, in the worst way." He raised his voice. "Yes, sergeant!"

The man at the oars of the boat called back, "We've covered every possible inch, captain!"

"Keep on, though. Might be a current that could move the body. I gotta be positive Bogarty isn't lying on the bottom of that lake."

"How is the bottom?" Aggie asked.

"Eh? Oh. Sandy. Some rocks. Muck—farther up. Snags. But when we quit, it'll be because we are pretty certain Bogarty isn't in that pond! I must say, Plum, I'm grateful to you. Sort of relieved, too. You know—those people are all good friends of mine. And they're pretty good people—as people go—excepting one or two. I hate to see 'em in a mess. And it gives you feathers in the stomach when you find yourself—in the line of duty—wondering which of your best friends might be guilty of a murder."

Sarah had taken to her bed; her mumps were undoubtedly worse. It seemed to Aggie, however, that her physical decline was due more to mental causes. She greeted his statement that Bogarty's body was probably not in the pond with a sullenness he had never seen in her. She said she was too tired to talk. The afternoon had faded into a yellow sunset across which streamed bluish clouds in long, horizontal pennons. It was a northern sky. Aggie went to his room and looked at it while he dressed for dinner.

He reflected that the act represented a complete change of his original program. A double change, in fact. He had at first been loath to dine at the clubhouse; he had agreed to do so because Sarah had wanted to know the minor scandals brewing there. Then he had revolted against that, because the scandals had risen to vast if shadowy proportions. Now he was preparing to go voluntarily to the club because of his own consuming interest. He had become, indeed, a prototype of his aunt—an enlarged prototype—full of curiosity, eager to pry into anybody's intimate life.

He went up the steps of the clubhouse almost blithely. His absorption had submerged his social awkwardness. There were people in the dining room and people in the solarium. Jack Browne was standing near the front door, talking to Mrs. Drayman. When he saw Aggie, he left her.

"Glad you're up," he said amiably. "Place is like a mausoleum. I mean—rather—a haunted house. Everybody has the jitters." He grinned boyishly. "You know, Aggie, that beard of yours gave me a shock, the day you checked in. Did I show it?"

Aggie smiled back. "Moderately." "I'm sorry as the deuce. Beth's around. Looking for you. Talking about you like a windmill. You've made a conquest there, pal."

Aggie's grin precipitated. "Where is she?"

"Playing table tennis—with Ralph—as usual. I'll go out with you—"

Aggie shook his head. "I wanted a bearing on her—to go the other way. She intimidates me."

The club manager chuckled. "Beth's all right. Not what you'd call soft-spoken—but—boy! If that raven, ravishing dream girl were waiting for me with the look in her eye she's got tonight—I'd run either—and not at a dogtrot either!"

Aggie was embarrassed. "Speaking of dogs," he said, "that wasn't a dog that bit Jim Calder. It was a fox. Remember you suggested that the chef's mutt was the size of a fox?"

Jack seemed momentarily not to catch the drift of this new subject. Then he nodded brightly. "Yeah. A fox! How in the world can they tell?"

"A guess," Aggie wondered if he'd let out too much of the trooper's information—or, rather, his suspicion. "Do they think—that Calder was—killed?"

Aggie shrugged. "The other man's blue and slightly wistful eyes grew cloudy. 'I hope he was! If I'd known what Calder was going to cause Dad to do—I'd have shot him myself. Which shows you that anybody—can kill a person, I suppose.'"

Danielle was entering through the French doors in the billiard room. Aggie watched her. His answer to Jack was offhand. "I can imagine how you felt. Still—your father shouldn't have done—that he did. I mean—you made an adjustment to—not having money." He stumbled on his words. Here he was, again blundering into embarrassment with Jack. "Sorry, fellow. Don't mean to hurt your feelings."

Jack's eyes shone. "It's okay, Aggie. Sorry I popped it out."

Danielle was coming toward them. Her words, spoken to carry halfway across the lounge, were bold. "Hello, Aggie, my duck! You swim like one, anyhow! Sorry I tipped you over this afternoon."

Aggie had the feeling that Danielle wanted everyone to hear her apology. He was sure of it as she continued to talk—and to walk toward him—in a pale amethyst dress that made her hair seem extravagantly bright and burning—gold, brass, copper. "The rotten Davis temper! I'm proud of my education, and you shouldn't have insulted it—even if you have more degrees than Einstein."

He had not insulted her education. She was close to him now, and she spoke in a more normal tone. "Forgive me!"

He wondered if she was always alighting herself in public with life, meaningless charades. "It would be hard to forgive you," he answered, "if I'd been unable to swim."

TRANSPORTATION VITAL

IF A PLAYER recognizes at the very beginning—when he makes his first study of the situation before playing to the opening lead—what is the main difficulty about his problem, he will pull through many a contract. Lots of declarer situations look like a cinch until you begin figuring out the order of tricks. Then you may see that clearing up one or more suits to have vital entries is the crux of the job. Failure to do this can cause plenty of transportation trouble.

The actual bidding on this deal was not reported by M. C. Murphy, of St. Petersburg, Fla., who had the South cards, but it was probably about as given. If he had opened with 1-Heart, he probably would not have received the lead of the heart 6, which made possible four tricks in that suit.

He calls it the "now you see it, now you don't hand" because everyone who saw it later said career, prestige and position as well as happiness in both business and personal life. Affairs of moment are stimulated into fresh fields of endeavor, and move swiftly with fine impetus to desired goals. There may be petty delays or anxieties but these may be ironed out by good nature and perhaps personal grace or charm.

Those whose birthday it is may be assured of a happy, progressive game was ridiculously easy with four tricks in hearts, four in clubs and at least one spade. But in the 11-table duplicate, everybody except Mr. Murray got set, losing two spades two diamonds and either a club or a heart. Most of them must have handled the entry situation badly.

Mr. Murray sensed his transportation trouble early, so decided to throw the defense in and let those worthless help him. The heart 8 got the first trick. Then came the club K and Q, heart A, and the spade 9 to West's Q. In trouble, West returned a diamond to the K. The club 5 was led to the dummy's J, then the diamond J used to force the A. The spade 6 was returned to the A. The K being dropped under it by Mr. Murray. Now, no matter what East did, the closed hand and dummy were left with only winners. Congressman Lea Continuing
Struggle for Vote Reform
Cites Dewey Vote as Proof
Of Old System's Failings

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—Representative Clarence F. Lea (D.) of California refuses to concede defeat in his 17-year-old fight in Congress to abolish the Electoral College.

Like the late Senator George W. Norris of Nebraska, who strove for years before he obtained enactment of the 20th amendment abolishing "lame duck" Congresses, Lea will try again.

He has re-introduced, for the 11th time since 1927, his resolution for a constitutional amendment providing for the election of the president and vice president by direct vote of the people. The resolution he introduced last year failed to get even to first base.

However, Lea, who has been in Congress since 1916, appeared somewhat more optimistic of obtaining results in the present Congress than he did in the old 78th Congress which adjourned Dec. 19.

For one thing, Representative Herbert C. Bonner (D.) of North Carolina has promised to hold public hearings on Lea's proposal before his committee on election of president, vice president and representatives in Congress.

"I'll be glad to give him a public hearing on his proposal," said Bonner. "That's an American privilege and I aim to keep it that way."

The hearings may be held early this session. Two of Lea's resolutions got as far as the House calendar, being unanimously approved by the committee, but failed to get the right of way from the House rules committee, an almost essential prerequisite to a House vote.

The Lea amendment would do away with presidential electors but would give each state electoral votes equal to the number of presidential electors now granted by the constitution.

"The outstanding feature of this proposal," explained Lea, "is that instead of crediting all the electoral votes of each state to the plurality candidate, as at present, it would divide them between the candidates in each state in exact proportion to their popular vote therein. The candidate receiving the highest electoral vote in the aggregate vote of the nation would be elected."

"No one can truthfully say that the electoral college system furnishes a just method of electing a president," declared Lea. "It cannot be said that its method of computing votes properly registers the will of the American people as expressed by their votes at the polls. This system is incapable of doing so accurately at any time."

"The outstanding difficulty of that system," he continued, "is the state unit vote. The candidate receiving the plurality vote in each state is given its total electoral vote."

"That system prevents minority votes for any candidate in any state from being counted to offset the majority vote of that candidate in other states."

"That is true although the minority vote NOT credited to the candidate in one state may greatly exceed his majority vote in another state."

"In the recent election, based on incomplete returns, Governor Dewey received 2,663,487 votes in 10 states, for which he received 62 electoral votes. In New York he received 2,997,588 votes, for which he received NO electoral votes."

"In other words, 334,099 votes were received by him in New York in excess of what he received in 10 states, yet he received NO electoral votes from the larger popular vote in New York and did receive 62 electoral votes from the smaller popular vote. The larger popular vote gave him NO electoral votes; the smaller popular vote gave him 62 electoral votes."

"Thus, in effect," pointed out Lea, "all minority votes in each state are disfranchised by the fact that their votes are NOT computed in determining the final result."

Sunday School Class Backs Christ Crusade

$25 Contribution Voted At Meet of Group

Members of Mrs. Marion's Sunday School class of the First Methodist church were entertained Monday at a delightful social session at the Marion party home, South Court street. Thirty-three members were present and Mrs. R. C. McAllister, joined the group as a guest. The class voted a donation of $25 to the "Crusade for Christ" movement of the church.

Mrs. Walter Heine, class president, conducted the business meeting. Mrs. Harold Pontius presented a fine devotional service, reading a story, "Heart Expansion," the Scripture lesson from Mark 12: 42-44, and offering prayer.

Letters were read by Mrs. Dan McClain, secretary, from boys in service who had received Christmas boxes from the class members.

Games entertained the group, prizes for scores going to Mrs. Dwight Steele, Mrs. Elliot Barnhill and Mrs. Howard Cook.

During the closing social hour, refreshments were served at small tables, attractive Valentine appointments being used.

The hostess group headed by Mrs. Harold Ullom included Miss Eloise Hilyard, Miss Elizabeth Hilyard, Miss Beatrice Sprague and Mrs. V. E. Newman.

Youth Fellowship

The Youth Fellowship of the Methodist church had its weekly meeting Sunday at the church with Robert Sprouse, president, in the chair. The group discussed plans for attending the Summer Institute at Lancaster.

Florence Bowers had the topic for the evening and an excellent discussion was carried on, the subject concerning the way to get young people to attend church and Sunday school.

James Lytle was in charge of the devotionals. Guests at the meeting were Private Glen McCoy and Miss Carolyn Hermann.

Pvt. McCoy told the group many things about Youth group meetings he had attended in Texas. Miss Hermann is attending Ohio State university, Columbus.

Hospital Board

The board of management of the Cincinnati Home and Hospital met Monday at the home of Mrs. Charles G. Shulze, 316 South Court street, and discussed the need in the community for a home for aged people who are unable to care for themselves. Mrs. Frank J. Bennett is president of the board.

It was announced that election of officers would be held at the March session. The usual reports were made by Miss Sadie Brunner, secretary, and bills were ordered paid.

DEWITT GENERAL HOSPITAL—Private Virgil J. Wolfe, 22 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Eyman Wolfe, who reside at 218 East Main street, is now a patient at DeWitt General Hospital, Auburn, California. Pvt. Wolfe served with the Infantry, and was recently returned to the United States as a battle casualty.

Harry S. Frye, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Frye, of Ashville, formerly of Circleville, has been transferred from Ohio State University, Columbus, to the University of Arizona.

Mrs. Anna Heeter, of East Mill street, has received word from her son, Jack, that he has a new address, having been transferred from McCook, Neb. His new address is: Cpl. Glen J. Heeter, ASN 35635355, 501st Bomb Group (VH) AAF, Harvard, Neb. His wife will remain for the present at McCook, where she is a member of the teaching staff of the public schools. Mrs. Heeter's other son, Bill, writes his mother from France of a change in his address: Private First Class Avery W. Heeter, ASN 35218612, Co. G, 36th Engrs (C), APO 758, c/o Postmaster, New York, N. Y.

Private George D. McDowell, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. George McDowell, of Ashville, has arrived safely overseas and is now stationed in Belgium, according to a letter received Monday by his parents. Mr. McDowell, who is superintendent of Pickaway county schools, and his family formerly lived in Circleville.

In 1900 66 percent of a tree was considered as "waste." In line with scientific practices which insure a continuous crop of trees, new processes now utilize 97 percent of each tree in wood products, making each tree go almost three times as far as its 1900 predecessor.

ASHVILLE

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Cromley celebrated their golden wedding anniversary Sunday, with a dinner at their home with some 50 members of their family present. Mr. and Mrs. Cromley were married Feb. 5, 1895, and have always resided in the Ashville community. They have six children: Mrs. M. M. Hagely of Columbus, Mrs. Raymond Rader of Circleville, and Elizabeth, Paul, Thaddeus and Homer Cromley, of Ashville.

Ashville—
Charles W. Fortner, who suffered two broken ribs in a fall two weeks ago, had the misfortune to break the ribs again last week.

Ashville—
Ashville's basketball team will journey to Grove City for a return game on Tuesday.

Ashville—
In accordance with the request of Gov. Lausche, the Ashville schools closed Monday. While the local school has considerable coal on hand, there is not sufficient coal for the remainder of the term if the present cold weather continues.

Ashville—
Mr. and Mrs. M. M. Hagely, of Columbus, were week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cromley. Mr. Hagely, a former stellar Ashville athlete, is football coach at North High, Columbus, where he produced one of the best high school teams in the state last season. Hagely's undefeated team was city champs and generally considered the third best team in the state.

Ashville—
Mrs. Elda Behnke, of Mt. Vernon, visited with her daughter, Mrs. Malcolm Rathburn and family last week.

Ashville—
Walter Hedges, Sunday received a shipment of 1000 Hampshire Reds which will form the nucleus for a breeding flock of Hampshire. Mr. Hedges, who has formerly specialized in Leghorns, will also continue with his high - laying strain of Leghorns.

Ashville—
Jack and Jim Irwin attended the Capital-Kenyon basketball game Saturday at Capital. The game resulted in a victory for Capital by a score of 68-28.

Ashville—
Will W. Fischer is spending a few days at Magnetic Springs.

Ashville—
Among the Ashville rooters at the Worthington game last week was George B. Stoker, former editor and publisher of the Pickaway Co. News and now serving in a similar capacity in Plain City.

New Hedy Hair-Do

THE USUAL, sophisticated hair-do worn by glamorous Hedy Lamarr is dispensed with in a new screen role. Here she wears one called the "Jeune Fille." It's arranged by parting it in the middle and drawing the front to the back where it's held in place by a huge bow. Short ends form a soft bang; hair portions hang loosely in the back and drape the shoulders. (International)

A Short Dinner Dress

THE short dinner dress remains a pet style in the new fashions, even although longer skirts have been a revival during the just past holidays. From Florida, moreover, comes the news that white frocks are the evening's smartest... and this model, short skirted and flowery, has a bright white background for its print.

There is pretty hem fullness, just enough to be legal under fabric restrictions, and the formality of the dress is accented by bead embroidery which outlines the print design of yellow, violet, green flowers and foliage, in self colors, over the bertha collar.

PLANS FOR OHIO CAGE TOURNEYS NOT CHANGED

COLUMBUS, Feb. 6 — H. W. Emswiler, commissioner of the Ohio High School Athletic association, said today that the association was continuing with plans to hold the annual scholastic basketball championship tournaments this Spring despite current fuel shortages and travel difficulties.

"I have been worried about the possibility that we will have to postpone or cancel the tournaments," Emswiler said. "But nothing will be done until later if the emergency continues."

Emswiler indicated that any decision by the state board of control on a proposal that the tournaments be cancelled would not be made until prior to the holding of the county meets Feb. 17, should the emergency situation still exist.

ZIVIC HOLDS UP PROMOTER—BUT IT'S ONLY GAG

FRITZ ZIVIC, the ex-welterweight champion, playfully holds up his wife, now a boxing promoter, and her matchmaker, Jack White, after Mrs. Zivic had been given a license to promote boxing in Pennsylvania. Fritz said he often had been accused of "sticking up" promoters so "I might as well stay in character with my own club." The Army corporal has returned to his Texas camp. (International)

Teen-Aged Wrestlers Ask No Favors From Their Opponents

WATERTOWN, Mass., Feb. 6—The courageous eight-man wrestling team of the Perkins institute for the blind, having won its first three matches, was confident today that it would finish the season undefeated.

The sightless, teen-aged squad from the century-old institution has defeated Needham high school's grapplers twice and Weymouth high once this season, with five dates remaining on the calendar.

Clarence Shellnut, boyish 26-year-old southerner who came to the school for a weekend visit two years ago, took such an interest in the sports curriculum that he decided to remain as an all-around sports director. The grapplers have won six meets and lost but three since he came on the scene. And he never coached a wrestling team before.

Shellnut, who maintains that his blind team faces a two-point disadvantage in every meet, pointed out that the majority of the swanky schools his squad has met boast 80-man teams. But his men never ask favors despite their handicaps.

"When a blind wrestler faces a man with normal vision, his opponent has a split second in which to apply what is known in wrestling as a control position," Shellnut said, explaining the "two point advantage."

"That is, he can fasten an effective grip on his sightless foe. Then he can twist the handicapped man onto his back, scoring two points. The wrestler who cannot see must take a moment to acclimate himself. It is then that he comes vulnerable."

Top man on the team is Capt. Herbert Sabin, 19, of Dalton, Mass., who lost his sight in a shooting accident eight years ago. An honor student Sabin has been pinned only once in three seasons of competition—and that back in 1943. Shellnut plans to enter Sabin in the finals of the state inter-scholastic meet and possibly in AAU competition.

Shellnut takes most pride in the second man on his team, Bob Smithdas of Pittsburgh, who has been blind and deaf since he was two years old. Despite his handicaps, Smithdas writes poetry and has the finest scholastic record of the school's 216 students.

SWIM MEET POSTPONED

COLUMBUS, Feb. 6 — Mike Peppe, director of the annual State AAU swimming championship meet scheduled for Saturday at the Ohio State natatorium, announced today that the meet had been postponed until a later date, "probably sometime in April."

Peppe said that Dr. Howard L. Bevis, president of Ohio State, decided to postpone the swim meet because of the critical water and fuel shortages.

NCAA TOURNEYS MAY BE PLAYED ON CAMPUSES

CHICAGO, Feb. 6—The championship basketball tournaments of the National Collegiate Athletic association may be played entirely on the campus of one of the association's member schools starting next year, according to Harold Olsen, Ohio State basketball coach and chairman of the N. C. A. A.'s basketball committee.

"There may be a move to play the tournaments at one school next year and it may be a good thing," he told the basketball writers' association over the long distance telephone yesterday.

Olsen's remarks were made in connection with the Big Ten's recent action requiring all member schools, starting next year, to play basketball games only on campuses, unless given special permission by the athletic directors.

The eastern sectional and the national N. C. A. A. championships currently are held in Madison Square Garden, while the western sectional tournament is run off in the Kansas City, Mo., auditorium.

BIVINS MOVES UP

WASHINGTON, Feb. 6—Jimmy Bivins, ranking Cleveland Negro heavyweight, earned the right to meet Arturo Godoy, South American heavyweight here in April or May, it was announced after his three round technical knockout victory over George Parks of Washington here last night.

JOYCE COMES BACK

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 6—The recuperative powers of Willie Joyce, Gary, Ind., lightweight were credited today with bringing him a 10-round decision over the veteran Chalky Wright of Los Angeles, who almost knocked the youngster out with a whirlwind start in the first two rounds.

KAY VISITS MARINES
The Naval Air Station, at Parris Island, South Carolina, will be the scene of Kay Kyser's "College of Musical Knowledge" quiz, on Wednesday. The faculty includes Kay, Georgia Carroll, Baritone Don Leslie, Ish Kabibble, Dolly Mitchell and the Town Criers.

NORTHS FIND TROUBLE
While trying to find the culprit who's been stealing the dress designs of Madame Margo, an exclusive couturiere, "Mr. and Mrs. North" discover they haven't a thread of evidence when the dress-maker is slain, on "Fitting for Murder," Wednesday. Alice Frost and Joseph Curtin star in the spook-and-spoof session.

GUESTS LISTED
They say that Veronica Lake, Walter Brennan, Basil Rathbone, Barry Fitzgerald, and Alan (Falstaff) Openshaw) Reed will be guests on Ken Murray's rollicking variety-quiz, "Which Is Which," Wednesday. But one or more of these stars may be impersonated by voice doubles. That's part of the fun! Studio contestants who guess correctly whether the stars or their "reasonable facsimiles" are performing at a concealed mike win prizes. Richard Himber's orchestra provides the music.

RADIO NEWS NOTES
A title is yet to be selected for the new Ed East and Polly show, scheduled to take the place of "Mirth and Madness" February 19. . . A list of six singers has been scheduled by Paul Lavalle for guest appearances on his "Highways in Melody." They are Vivian Delal Chiesa, Dorothy Kirsten, Thomas L. Thomas, Earl Wrightson, Harrison Knox and Leonard Stokes.

A program, based along the lines of the Henry Aldrich series, is said to be planned by the sponsors of Ed Wynn, who are dropping the comic in March. . . "Shower of Stars" is the title of the new Morton Gould program which bows on February 8, as a temporary replacement for the ailing Major Bowes. Regina Resnik, Met Opera star, a Bowes amateur hour graduate, will be the first guest.

Hal McIntyre and his orchestra will be one of the first name bands to make the hop overseas to entertain servicemen, if plans are consummated. . . Xavier Cugat has signed Elena Verdugo as featured vocalist with his band to replace Lina Romay, currently featured in films. . . Sully Mason, heard for many years on the air as vocalist for Kay Kyser, has left the "College of Musical Knowledge" maestro and will baton his own orchestra.

The new title of "Breakfast at Sardi's," which starts its fifth year, has been changed to "Tom Breneman's Breakfast in Hollywood."

climaxed his romance on a streetcar.

"I was going with her," Pvt. Smith told Judge W. A. Day in District Court, "and one day she asked me to marry her. This was on the streetcar."

But the bride, Miss Lottie June Drake, 18, Council Bluffs, Ia., rejected her husband a few days after their marriage.

Pvt. Smith said Miss Drake had told him she had applied for a job as a trolley pilot because she thought she would like the work. She was turned down because she was too young. After the marriage, she applied again and was accepted by the streetcar company.

"After she got the job she would not have anything to do with me," the private said. "She served some kind of a paper on me, kicking me out, and she wrote me saying it would be best if I didn't see her any more."

Pvt. Smith was granted an annulment, the bride's maiden name was restored—and that was the end of the ride.

Tarleton Farmers' Institute To Celebrate Golden Anniversary

"GAY NINETIES" PROGRAM TO BE STAGED FRIDAY

History Of Organization Will Be Outlined At Evening Session

Golden anniversary of the Tarleton Farmers' Institute will be observed Friday and Saturday when the fiftieth institute is held in the Tarleton community hall.

Special programs will be held at each of the five sessions. The 50th anniversary program will be held Friday evening. A "Gay Nineties" program will be presented, in charge of Mrs. Helen Black Anderson, whose father was one of the organizers of the first Tarleton institute. The program will include a history of the institute; readings; music and talks by William L. Manahan and Mrs. Byron Grimes, representatives of the state extension department.

Several persons appearing on the program are sons and daughters of organizers of the institute. A special feature of the session will be the awarding of prizes to persons in "Gay Nineties" costumes. Prizes will be given in three classes, men, women and the best couple.

The first session will be held at 10:30 a. m. Friday, with an afternoon program scheduled for 1:30 p. m. Sessions will be held at 10 a. m. and 1 p. m. Community dinner will be served both days.

President of the institute is O. S. Mowery, who has been an officer for 25 years. Other officers are W. E. Luckhart, vice president; O. E. Judy, secretary; G. F. Shride, treasurer; Elizabeth Wilson, hostess. Members of the reception committee are Mrs. Carroll Strous, Mrs. Margaret Ballard and Mrs. Edith Poling.

Closing of all schools and icy roads spoiled the opening Monday of the Monroe institute but the program originally planned for Tuesday was to go on Wednesday and Thursday the Walnut institute is scheduled in the Walnut school. The Tarleton institute is the last scheduled for the county this winter.

SUPERVISORS CHOSEN FOR SOIL CONSERVATION

Organization of the soil conservation supervisors who will direct the conservation program in Pickaway county has been completed, following several delays caused by icy roads which prevented a meeting.

The five supervisors chosen by a vote of county farmers after the conservation district had been set up will meet February 27 to make plans for the Spring program.

The supervisors are: Ralph E. May, Route 1, Circleville, president; Frank E. Beatty, Route 1, Orient, vice president; Lawrence B. Liston, Route 3, Circleville, secretary; Steward E. Beers, Route 2, Ashville, treasurer; Wayne Brown, Route 1, Groveport, board member.

FUNERAL SERVICES FOR DANIEL MYERS THURSDAY

Funeral services for Daniel E. Myers, 75, will be Thursday at 2 p. m. at the Deffenbaugh chapel, with the Rev. George L. Troutman, of Trinity Lutheran church officiating. Burial will be in Reber Hill cemetery.

KIWANIS MAKES FINAL PLANS FOR COLLECTION

Final plans for a city-wide collection of scrap paper and tin cans Wednesday afternoon were made at the Kiwanis meeting held Monday night in Hanley's restaurant.

Kenneth M. Robbins, chairman of the committee, urged all Kiwanians to be at city hall not later than 1 p. m. Wednesday to work on the scrap drive. Trucks will leave city hall at 1 p. m. to cover the city.

Mr. Robbins stated that no call-backs could be made and asked the public to cooperate by having scrap paper and tin cans on the sidewalks in front of their homes or business houses by noon.

A technicolor sound film, "Life-line of the Nation" was shown at the meeting by C. R. Rowland, of the Pennsylvania railroad publicity department. The picture showed the part the railroads of the nation are playing in the all-out war effort.

Other guests at the meeting were Earl Hilyard and Harold Ullom, representing the Pennsylvania railroad.

J. Wray Henry was in charge of the meeting.

Prisoners of war, working on private contract jobs, earned approximately $4,000,000 for the treasury of the United States during October, 1944.
